US: STEC illnesses increasing in FSISregulated products -

Following analysis of outbreak data associated with FSIS-regulated meat, poultry and processed egg products, the results indicated that the overall number of STECs (Shiga toxin-producing E. coli) illnesses nationally has either plateaued or increased over the past 18 months. As a result of its consideration of the STEC issue, the FSIS Strategic Performance Working Group (SPWG) has identified a number of actions that should be taken by FSIS to reduce STEC contamination; view them here.

US: California issues public health warning over raw milk -

The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) Director and State Health Officer Dr. Karen Smith warned against the dangers of drinking raw milk following a recent investigation into a cluster outbreak of campylobacteriosis. California, where the sale of raw milk at the retail level, is legal has publically recommended not to drink raw milk or raw milk products, or give raw milk, colostrum, raw cream or other raw milk products to children. EU: Ireland's raw milk contains harmful bacteria -

The Food Safety Authority of Ireland (FSAI) conducted a 12-month microbiological survey on samples of raw milk filters and raw milk from bulk storage tanks used for cooling and holding raw milk on 600 farms in order to collect baseline information on the prevalence of the pathogens Listeria monocytogenes, Campylobacter spp., VTEC, Salmonella spp. and the hygiene indicators Escherichia coli and coagulasepositive staphylococci. Based on the findings of this report, the FSAI continues to recommend that the sale of raw milk for direct human consumption should be prohibited in Ireland. To view the results, click here.

EU: ANSES study reveals incorrect heating increases substance migration risk -

The French National Consumer Institute (ANSES) conducted a comparative study on food packaging that can be heated in conventional ovens, microwave ovens or by steam. The results of their study showed that while the migration of substances from the packaging to the food is generally low and below the regulatory values, it does increase significantly in the case of non-compliance with instructions for reheating.
